Mirrors, ponds, portals—each captivating the senses in a manner that leaves one utterly transfixed. The enchanting allure of mirrors, with their ability to weave spells, and portals, serving as conduits to alternate dimensions, speaks volumes about artworks that transcend mere surface engagement. George's paintings beckon, urging viewers to peer beneath the surface, illuminated by an inner light that emanates from within.

If colour possesses the power to summon memories, evoke emotions, and guide us towards self-awareness, then George, with his meticulous orchestration of colour, light, and restrained gestures, presents a veritable feast for the eyes urging viewers to pause, reflect, and engage deeply with the rich array of visual experiences he presents.

Over the span of three decades, George Vergette has bestowed upon us a trove of revelations to ponder. He remains steadfast in his devotion to his craft, methodically constructing his paintings layer by layer. Each stroke of colour shapes the mood and dictates the trajectory of the next layer, while sudden marks emerge, enticing the viewer to lean in closer—perhaps edging towards another realm. Mystery and intention permeate his works, with each viewing akin to the temptation of a glossy, crimson apple being proffered.
